GRANGE SEEKING GAMBLING CURB

1,600 Court Fans See Opening Tilts Of Tourney Here

Atlanta, Jackson, Monroe Win First Games; New Holland Falls

More than 1,600 basketball enthusiasts poured into Pickaway Fairgrounds Coliseum Monday night to witness the opening round of the annual hardwood panorama as 11 county Class B teams started taking their thousand-to-one shots at fame and glory.

The county's 11 schools are among the 945 in Ohio who will come roaring out of bandbox gymnasiums all over Buckeyeodom seeking a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow.

At the end of the rainbow some six weeks hence, one of those 945 teams—and Pickaway countians hope it will be one of the 11 local outfits—will find enduring fame which comes to the team capturing the state Class B championship.

In Pickaway county, the first tossup in the annual scramble came when the Atlanta Red Raiders and the Scioto Buffaloes tangled in the first game.

ATLANTA'S cagers won their initial victory, taking the hapless Buffaloes 38-21. The Raiders held the heavy end edge throughout the game.

Both teams experienced difficulty adjusting themselves to the large court, chucking the ball over the hoop instead of into it numerous times in the first half.

David Long sank 10 free throws and four field goals during the fracas to lead the victors with 18 tallies, while Bob Duvall sank three field goals and one charity toss to lead the losers with a total of seven.

The second fray of the evening was between the New Holland quint and the Jackson township squad.

Favored New Holland found itself looking at the Jackson lads from the losing end of a 32-27 score when the final buzzer sounded.

The Jackson Wildcats lived up to their names in the scrap, holding the opposition at bay the whole tilt. They controlled bank boards and the ball more than their half of the time.

It was evident the Jackson lads were out to whip the New Holland boys from the start. Their strategy consisted of

Spring Weather Hits Ohio; May Stay Few Days

Spring-like weather held on in Ohio today and there was no indication of a return to severe winter conditions or even moderately cold weather during the balance of this week.

The weather bureau's five-day outlook promised for the first time in more than a month a range of above-normal temperatures through Sunday.

High water conditions in the state were returning to normal everywhere except in the Ohio river which passed flood stage this morning. The Cincinnati lowlands were inundated and the Red Cross set up a new emergency shelter in the queen city to care for flood victims.

Continuation of mild weather and no additional rain were expected to bring a quick recession in the river after it reaches its crest, predicted at 55 feet, sometime tomorrow.

YESTERDAY afternoon the mercury climbed to the highest points since early in December and forecasters said temperatures would be several degrees higher this afternoon. They said there would be no change tomorrow, with conditions turning just a little cooler by Thursday.

Highest temperature yesterday was 59 degrees at Chesapeake and the mercury hit into the 50s most everywhere in the state.

Taft To Back Curb Extension

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, GOP policy leader, said today that he hopes to bring legislation extending rent controls to April 30, 1949, to the Senate floor for action next week.

High River Waters Now Falling In Mississippi And Ohio Valleys

By International News Service
The Mississippi and the Ohio river valleys remained the only two areas seriously threatened with floods today as high waters in most of the southeastern states receded slowly.

Mississippi National Guard planes and American Red Cross disaster crews worked feverishly to evacuate 100 families from along the Tennessee river near Aberdeen, Miss.

Three hundred families already have been driven from lowland homes.

Along the Ohio river from Cincinnati to Paducah, Ky., residents awaited the advancing crest of the rampaging river. Latest reports from Louisville said the Ohio had risen 11 feet since Saturday and was approaching flood stage.

Danger of a major flood apparently had abated at both Pomeroy and Portsmouth. The river reached a crest of 44 feet at Pomeroy at midnight and was expected to crest at 54.5 feet at Portsmouth by mid-afternoon.

Although lowland areas around Portsmouth were flooded, the city's dam system makes a 66-foot crest necessary to cause major damage.

Cincinnati Red Cross officials set up a second emergency shelter last night and moved 12 families from a flooded eastern area. They said 1,000 families will probably be affected before the flood crests at an expected 55 feet tomorrow morning.

New aluminum flood gate barricades were erected at Paducah as a precautionary measure and pumps were put into operation on the flood wall.

Major losses in Mississippi so far have been to livestock. Some stock has been marooned in the flood-swept region and other animals have been seen swimming over their pasture land.

Between Columbus, Miss., and Aberdeen, 100 feet of track on the Frisco railroad was washed out by the swirling waters. Main highways in the area also were blocked.

At Aberdeen, the Tennessee was hovering at 44.2 feet, two feet above its previous all-time high of 1946.

Rivers in North and South Carolina and in Georgia receded from the previous highs and only Rome, Ga., was threatened with further flood damage. The threat was not serious, however.

Meanwhile, C. E. Blee, chief engineer of the Tennessee Valley Authority, credited the TVA flood control system with averting about $6,000,000 in possible damage in the Chattanooga area.

Blee declared: "The flood control system on the Tennessee river functioned as planned, and at no time was the release of water out of control. At Chattanooga the flood crest was reduced 10 feet."

WITH A FLOOD CREST OF 52 feet swirling through its streets, Columbia, Tenn., became the hardest hit town in middle Tennessee. The present flood of the Duck River at Columbia, exceeding the previous record of 48 feet set in 1902, wrecked the water works and caused evacuation of 160 families. It cut off all traffic between Nashville and Birmingham. In the foreground, looking like a canal, can be seen U. S. highway 41.

Potato Quality Test Is Related

CHARDON, Feb. 17.—If you want to know how to tell the difference between a good cooking potato and a bad one—read on.

Harry Reiley of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange demonstrated just how to differentiate between the spuds at a meeting of Geauga and Lake County housewives here yesterday.

Reiley placed a quarter pound of salt in a quart of water and then dropped in a potato. If the potato floats, it has no cooking qualities; if it sinks or is suspended, it has excellent cooking qualities. Reiley held. He explained that the dry potato sinks because of less moisture. Water in a potato determines cooking qualities, he added.

Hollywood Aide Seeking Curbs On Walkouts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, today advocated compulsory arbitration to curb what he called "the industrial anarchy" of jurisdictional strikes.

Johnston recommended the legislation to a House labor subcommittee investigating the prolonged Hollywood studio jurisdictional strife while depending the producers against charges that they "conspired" with leaders of one AFL faction to effect a "lockout" of another group of AFL unions.

The charge was made by Rep. Kearns (R) Pa., chairman of the subcommittee. Johnston laid blame for the strife which flared last September to "the American Federation of Labor alone." He said the producers "are always caught in the middle" and declared management has "suffered severely."

8 Navy Men Feared Lost When Launch Capsizes

HYERES, France, Feb. 17.—One officer and seven enlisted men of the United States Navy are missing and feared drowned today in the sinking of a tender from the Aircraft Carrier Midway off the French Riviera near Hyeres.

The tender crashed into a breakwater and sank while carrying between 160 and 200 of the Midway's personnel back to their ship after spending the evening at the Hyeres Casino.

Initial accounts of the early morning mishap said possibly as many as 40 men were lost. Some 160 to 200 men were aboard the launch when the accident occurred at 2 a. m. at the harbor exit off Hyeres in South-eastern France, about 50 miles east of Marseille.

MANY SMALL craft rushed to the scene to pick up survivors to return them to the Midway or take them for treatment of injuries.

The craft filled rapidly with water after it was torn open by what was described as part of a concrete breakwater.

The tender struck the object as the men were putting out to return to the Midway, now based in the Mediterranean, following a special party in their honor at the Casino.

Labor Leaders Meet In Paris

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Labor representatives of the 16 nations participating in the Marshall Plan made preparations today for an early meeting to discuss labor's role in the European Recovery Program.

The decision to issue a conference call, possibly before the end of this week, was taken despite strong opposition by Russians and Soviet sympathizers within the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Announcement of the "rump" conference, possibly heralding a split of world labor into two blocs, is expected at the conclusion of current talks by French and British labor leaders.

Many of the rescued sailors were injured. These were rushed to the naval hospital at Toulon.

It was believed that heavy seas were responsible for tossing the tender against the breakwater.

Several of the survivors swam more than a mile through the choppy sea to the shore.

Others were picked up by boats of a combined French and American rescue force.

U.S. Diplomats Eye Russian Move In Korea

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The State department is understood today to be planning a biting comment on Russia's reported establishment of an independent republic in the Soviet-controlled northern zone of Korea.

State department policymakers studying the reports from Korea regard such a step as a flagrant violation of the Moscow agreement and a statement is expected as soon as all the facts have been gathered.

The Moscow agreement provides, as did the Potsdam agreement on Germany, for the political and economic restoration of the country as a whole and return of the government, after 40 years of Japanese occupation, to the Korean people.

A later agreement which enraged many Koreans provided that the occupying powers operate a trusteeship over the country.

Washington officials are concerned primarily over the suddenness of the move in Northern Korea. It is interpreted to mean that the Western Powers are now confronted with the accomplished fact that a Communist satellite regime is functioning in this important area.

Moreover, the regime reportedly is in an organized position and ready to move in and take over all Korea when and if the United States tires and brings its soldiers home.

NEW PRICE HIGHS AHEAD?

Commodity Market Trend Starts Reversing Self

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—The reversal of the down trend in the commodity and security markets indicated today that the recent retail price reductions have run their course and that the housewife could look for higher prices.

The grain market rallied sharply yesterday and buoyed up the livestock and security markets, reversing the downward trend that started with a spectacular break in prices Feb. 4.

Housewives, meanwhile, benefited from some retail price reductions in food that followed the break, but experts warned that the "price war" has run its course and that food prices, led by meat, probably would bound back to new highs.

Corn futures and soybeans advanced the 8-cent daily limit permitted by the Chicago Board of Trade at one time yesterday, and wheat and oats were sharply higher in sympathy.

THE RISE in the price of corn, leading feed grain, strengthened the livestock market in Chicago where hog prices soared 50 cents to $1 to the highest levels in 10 days.

Stocks on the New York exchange registered the largest recovery in four months as gains of fractions to two or more points were chalked up for some leading issues.

The recent retail price reductions effected considerable savings for the housewife over the weekend and brought back the "nickel cup of coffee" in Cincinnati, but the downward trend appeared to be short-lived.

Marshall Plan Bill Approved By Senate Panel

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The Senate foreign relations committee completed action on the European Recovery Program today and Sen. Vandenberg (R) Mich., committee chairman, promptly introduced the legislation in the Senate.

The committee unanimously voted for a four-year Marshall Plan to cost $5.3 billion during the first 12 months.

The Senate will begin consideration of the ERP bill on March 1.

The committee adopted an amendment by Sen. Connolly (D) Tex., calling upon European nations receiving aid to take all possible steps to balance their budgets.

The bill provides for creation of an independent government agency backed up by an advisory council of 11 private citizens to manage the recovery program.

Cash butter prices rose 2 to 3 cents a pound in Chicago and 2 to 2½ cents in New York. The rise reflected the relative short supplies and the firmness of the grain and butter substitute markets.

Live poultry prices, reduced last week, were 2 cents higher in Chicago.

CASH WHEAT premiums at Minneapolis were 1 to 2 cents higher compared with May.

Lard advanced 0.85 to 0.95 cents a pound.

Agricultural experts at the Farm and Home Week sessions of the University of Illinois told dairy farmers that they can expect milk prices to remain high for at least the first half of the year despite the recent break in commodity prices.

There still was no evidence of government buying in either wheat or wheat flour.

President Tells Women They Hold Reins On Costs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—President Truman said today that the women of the nation hold in their hands the power to bring down the high cost of living.

The chief executive told a group of women's leaders meeting here that women have the answer to high prices and inflation because they control almost 100 percent the "power of the consumer."

Mr. Truman did not, in so many words, call upon the women to launch a buyers' strike—for he is known to oppose such stringent methods—but he did call upon them to use wisely "to its full capacity—the power of the consumer."

The President spoke to the opening session of the Women's Bureau conference of the Labor department.

THE THREE-day conference is being attended by more than 200 delegates from key women's organizations, including trade unions.

Mr. Truman spoke briefly. His

WASHINGTON, C. H., Feb. 17.—Elmer C. Downard, 21, of Washington C. H. was under sentence of life imprisonment today for beating his two-year-old stepdaughter, Carolyn Faye Stapleton to death.

Downard pleaded guilty to second degree murder Saturday, saying he beat the child because she cried. Fayette County Common Pleas Judge H. M. Rankin passed sentence.

High Prices Said Result Of Trading

Speculator Raps Action Of Panel

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The National Grange charged today that "excessive gambling" in the commodity market results in "harmful fluctuation" in the cost of living.

The Grange asked Congress to establish trading market requirements to curb speculation. The position of the national farm organization was presented to the Senate agriculture committee by J. T. Sanders, Grange legislative counsel.

He declared that market fluctuation hurt producers, dealers and consumers and "are useful only to traders who buy and sell purely for speculation."

Earlier, Dyke Cullum, big-time Washington speculator, told reporters that he "lost" the sale of seven million pounds of peas because the Ferguson committee investigating market gambling seized his records.

SANDERS testified in support of a bill introduced by Sen. Barkley (D) Ky., which would grant the secretary of agriculture authority to set margins up to 100 percent on all commodities futures trading.

The Grange spokesman told the committee, however, that he would limit the margin the secretary would be allowed to impose to 50 percent.

He also said that a margin setting commission might be more satisfactory than putting all of the power in the hands of one man.

Sanders charged that "wild fluctuation of prices" produced by speculation increases the al-

Cabbie Killed In Taxi Strike

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 17.—One man was shot to death today as violence flared anew in the third day of a strike of Yellow Cab company drivers here.

Police said Louis E. Dilembo, 28, a striking driver, was killed instantly by a single bullet reportedly fired by a driver of an Owl Company cab. The Owl drivers, members of a rival CIO union, are not on strike.

Police said the shooting occurred when a group of striking drivers threatened the Owl cab operator when he stopped for a red light.

Antarctic Tiff Rages

Chile, Argentine Lash British

SANTIAGO, Feb. 17.—Britain's dispute with Chile and Argentina over islands in the Antarctic region sharpened today after Chile flatly rejected a British suggestion to take the argument before the International Court.

In a strongly worded statement, the Chilean foreign ministry said: "Britain should request Chilean permission to remain on Chilean soil."

The Chilean government turned thumbs down on a Hague court settlement because "many countries are interested in the Antarctic and such action would be unilateral."

At the same time, it was learned in Buenos Aires, that Argentina is preparing a reply to British Minister of State Hector McNeil's statement in the House of Commons that Britain intends to back up her Falkland Island claims.

McNEIL YESTERDAY said that "steps are being taken to ensure that the governor of the Falklands receives the support needed" in the controversy with Chile and Argentina.

The Falklands are a group of islands 300 miles northeast of Cape Horn. Britain regards them as her territory.

High River Waters Now Falling In Mississippi And Ohio Valleys

By International News Service

The Mississippi and the Ohio river valleys remained the only two areas seriously threatened with floods today as high waters in most of the southeastern states receded slowly.

Mississippi National Guard planes and American Red Cross disaster crews worked feverishly to evacuate 100 families from along the Tennessee river near Aberdeen, Miss.

Three hundred families already have been driven from lowland homes.

Along the Ohio river from Cincinnati to Paducah, Ky., residents awaited the advancing crest of the rampaging river. Latest reports from Louisville said the Ohio had risen 11 feet since Saturday and was approaching flood stage.

Danger of a major flood apparently had abated at both Pomeroy and Portsmouth. The river reached a crest of 44 feet at Pomeroy at midnight and was expected to crest at 54.5 feet at Portsmouth by mid-afternoon.

Although lowland areas around Portsmouth were flooded, the city's dam system makes a 66-foot crest necessary to cause major damage.

Cincinnati Red Cross officials set up a second emergency shelter last night and moved 12 families from a flooded eastern area. They said 1,000 families will probably be affected before the flood crests at an expected 55 feet tomorrow morning.

New aluminum flood gate barricades were erected at Paducah as a precautionary measure and pumps were put into operation on the flood wall.

Major losses in Mississippi so far have been to livestock. Some stock has been marooned in the flood-swept region and other animals have been seen swimming over their pasture land.

Between Columbus, Miss., and Aberdeen, 100 feet of track on the Frisco railroad was washed out by the swirling waters. Main highways in the area also were blocked.

At Aberdeen, the Tennessee was hovering at 44.2 feet, two feet above its previous all-time high of 1946.

Rivers in North and South Carolina and in Georgia receded from the previous highs and only Rome, Ga., was threatened with further flood damage. The threat was not serious, however.

Meanwhile, C. E. Blee, chief engineer of the Tennessee Valley Authority, credited the TVA flood control system with averting about $6,000,000 in possible damage in the Chattanooga area.

Blee declared: "The flood control system on the Tennessee river functioned as planned, and at no time was the release of water out of control. At Chattanooga the flood crest was reduced 10 feet."

WITH A FLOOD CREST of 52 feet swirling through its streets, Columbia, Tenn., became the hardest hit town in middle Tennessee. The present flood of the Duck River at Columbia, exceeding the previous record of 48 feet set in 1902, wrecked the water works and caused evacuation of 160 families. It cut off all traffic between Nashville and Birmingham. In the foreground, looking like a canal, can be seen U. S. highway 41.

President Tells Women They Hold Reins On Costs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—President Truman said today that the women of the nation hold in their hands the power to bring down the high cost of living.

The chief executive told a group of women's leaders meeting here that women have the answer to high prices and inflation because they control almost 100 percent of the "power of the consumer."

Mr. Truman did not, in so many words, call upon the women to launch a buyers' strike—for he is known to oppose such stringent methods—but he did call upon them to use wisely "to its full capacity—the power of the consumer."

The President spoke to the opening session of the Women's Bureau conference of the Labor department.

THE THREE-day conference is being attended by more than 200 delegates from key women's organizations, including trade unions.

Mr. Truman spoke briefly. His (Continued on Page Two)

Fayette Man Gets Life Term

WASHINGTON, C. H., Feb. 17—Elmer C. Downard, 21, of Washington, C. H., was today sentenced to life imprisonment under sentence of life imprisonment today for beating his two-year-old stepdaughter, Carolyn Faye Stapleton, to death.

Downard pleaded guilty to second degree murder Saturday, saying he beat the child because she cried. Fayette County Common Pleas Judge H. M. Rankin passed sentence.

Hollywood Aide Seeking Curbs On Walkouts

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, today advocated compulsory arbitration to curb what he called "the industrial anarchy" of jurisdictional strikes.

Johnston recommended the legislation to a House labor subcommittee investigating the prolonged Hollywood studio jurisdictional strife while depending the producers against charges that they "conspired" with leaders of one AFL faction to effect a "lockout" of another group of AFL unions.

The charge was made by Rep. Kearns (R) Pa., chairman of the subcommittee.

Johnston laid blame for the strife which flared last September to "the American Federation of Labor alone." He said the producers "are always caught in the middle" and declared management has "suffered severely."

In his recommendation, Johnston said: "Legislation should compel the inclusion in all union-management contracts of clauses, pledging the unions to peaceful arbitration of disputes over jurisdiction between rival unions."

Labor Leaders Meet In Paris

PARIS, Feb. 17—Labor representatives of the 16 nations participating in the Marshall Plan made preparations today for an early meeting to discuss labor's role in the European Recovery Program.

The decision to issue a conference call, possibly before the end of this week, was taken despite strong opposition by Russians and Soviet sympathizers within the World Federation of Trade Unions.

Announcement of the "rump" conference, possibly heralding a split of world labor into two blocs, is expected at the conclusion of current talks by French and British labor leaders.

Cabbie Killed In Taxi Strike

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 17—One man was shot to death today as violence flared anew in the third day of a strike of Yellow Cab company drivers here.

Police said Louis E. Dilembo, 28, a striking driver, was killed instantly by a single bullet reportedly fired by a driver of an Owl Company cab. The Owl drivers, members of a rival CIO union, are not on strike.

Police said the shooting occurred when a group of striking drivers threatened the Owl cab operator when he stopped for a red light.

shooting the ball from near mid-court, where the opposition couldn't block their shots or tie up the ball.

HIGH SCORERS for the fray were Norman Schooley for the victors with 14 tallies, while Joe Gooley and Gene Ankrum tied for high for the losers with seven points apiece.

The last game of the evening was between the Monroe Indians and the Darby Trojans with the Indians coming out on top of the heap at the final buzzer, 53-41.

The Indians were hard pressed during the first three cantos to cleave the Trojan scalp, being on the short end of the score in each stanza until the final.

With the score standing at 31-22 in the last frame, the Darby team loosened its hold on its opponent, permitting the Indians to score 31 points in the last eight minutes, while Darby picked up but 10.

Two weeks ago, the same teams met with the same winner but a different final score. When the lowly Darby team visited the tepees of the Monroe lads, they found the door slammed in their faces, wondering what they had done to deserve the 84-26 hand down given them by their hosts.

When the Darby lads led in all but the last canto Monday night, Monroe boosters got the sinking feeling of an imposed retribution for their previous inhospitality. Their team let them hold their heads high in the last frame, however, when they ran all over the Darby boys.

LESTER Saunders was high point man for the winners with a total of 21 markers, while Emerson Connell gleaned 14 points for his Darby quint.

High Prices Said Result Of Trading

ready heavy natural risks the farmer must face.

He acknowledged that some speculation is healthy, but declared that regulatory powers are needed to hold it in check.

SANDERS said the Barkley bill would be especially effective in barring "small, uninformative traders" from the market. He contended that these traders produce a market undermined by "thinly-margined accounts," a situation which "culminates always in sudden price collapses and chaotic price movements."

Cullum, "speculation manager" for Sen. Elmer Thomas (D) Okla., declared also that the speculation probers failed to return one folder for which he has a receipt, and that they deny they took it.

Cullum made the accusation in the presence of Thomas, who had been asked by reporters to amplify his reference in a public letter to Chairman Ferguson (R) Mich., to "raids on the private offices of citizens."

The countercharge came as Ferguson announced that the subcommittee has not yet decided whether to hold open hearings to investigate Thomas' activity in the commodity markets.

AT THE SAME TIME, the subcommittee dropped its inquiry into the "killing"—variously estimated from $200,000 to $400,000—that E. T. Maynard, Chicago speculator, made by foreseeing the commodity market break.

At the same time, Rep. Anderson (R) Minn., chairman of the House speculation committee, said his group had investigators look into Maynard's dealings in Chicago, and has not decided whether to have a hearing.

High Prices Said Result Of Trading

ready heavy natural risks the farmer must face.

He acknowledged that some speculation is healthy, but declared that regulatory powers are needed to hold it in check.

SANDERS said the Barkley bill would be especially effective in barring "small, uninformed traders" from the market. He contended that these traders produce a market undermined by "thinly-margined accounts," a situation which "culminates always in sudden price collapses and chaotic price movements."

Cullum, "speculation manager" for Sen. Elmer Thomas (D Okla.), declared also that the speculation probes failed to return one folder for which he has a receipt, and that they deny they took it.

Cullum made the accusation in the presence of Thomas, who had been asked by reporters to amplify his reference in a public letter to Chairman Ferguson (R) Mich., to "raids on the private offices of congressmen."

The countercharge came as Ferguson announced that the subcommittee has not yet decided whether to hold open hearings to investigate Thomas' activity in the commodity markets.

At the same time, the subcommittee dropped its inquiry into the "killing"—variously estimated from $200,000 to $400,000—that E. T. Maynard, Chicago speculator, made by foreseeing the commodity market break.

At the same time, Rep. Andresen (R) Minn., chairman of the House speculation committee, said his group had investigators look into Maynard's dealings in Chicago, and has not decided whether to have a hearing.

Separate Peace Try Claimed

MOSCOW, Feb. 17.—Soviet Russia concluded today its four-part retort to American publication of Nazi-Russian relations with a charge that the United States and Britain conducted peace negotiations with Germany in 1941 and 1943.

The Russians asserted that the U. S. sought to negotiate a separate peace in 1943 under which a Greater Germany would have been established as a bulwark against the spread of Bolshevism.

The Soviets charged that these negotiations were carried out by Allen W. Dulles, brother of John Foster Dulles, in Switzerland. They said that Dulles, then attached to the American legation in Bern, dealt with German Prince Max Hohenlohe "on direct instruction on the authority of the White House."

The British, according to the Russians, undertook their negotiations in Portugal in 1941. In this charge it was said that the Max Aitken, son of Publisher Lord Beaverbrook, spoke for the British with a Hungarian named Gustav von Koeber. Von Koeber purportedly acted "with the authority of the German ministry of foreign affairs."

THE LATEST Soviet blast against the Western Allies was the fourth and final installment of the Soviet information bureau's promised reply to American State department disclosure of Moscow's dealings with the Hitler government which led to a treaty of nonaggression subsequently scrapped by the Nazis.

A further barb was thrown into the Western Allies by a Russian charge that the opening of the western front in Europe was delayed deliberately with the hope that Russia would be "bled white" and that she would be eliminated as a world power.

The Russians also denounced Britain and France for giving military aid to Finland in that country's war against the Soviets.

Perkins Orders Cruiser Probe

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 17.—Lewis Perkins, Coast Guard commander stationed at St. Louis, has ordered an investigation into the circumstances of the sinking of the pleasure cruiser "Vagabond" at Cincinnati last Saturday.

Perkins ordered the probe after receiving a number of queries from Cincinnati and after learning that a Cincinnati newspaper had editorially criticized the Coast Guard.

According to information at St. Louis Coast Guard headquarters, the Vagabond had asked the Coast Guard Cutter Fern to save her from sinking.

The Fern's commanding officer decided that because there were no lives in danger, it would be unwise to jeopardize the cutter and its crew in a rescue attempt.

Rockefellers Go On Keys Tour

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 17.—Winthrop Rockefeller and his bride of four days were reported motoring through Florida's picturesque Keys today—out of deference to the "Missus."

Friends of the millionaire and his pretty blonde wife said that "Bobo" had expressed a desire to visit the Keys.

The Palm Beach informants admitted, however, that they were just speculating, inasmuch as Rockefeller and his wife have virtually "vanished" and have successfully evaded newspapermen for two days.

According to friends, "Bobo"—who is the daughter of Lithuanian coal miner—is probably getting a chance to some driving on the motor jaunt. Rockefeller, however, is said to take a dim view of women at the wheel.

It's a man's life!

Do you know whether you've got what it takes when the chips are down?

There's one good way to find out just how much of a man you are. Enlist in the U. S. Army as a combat soldier. That's tops — the spearhead of the Army's manpower.

The world's best training for manhood is in the Infantry, Artillery and Armored Cavalry. Once you've made the grade in those hard-hitting services you'll know what you've got. You'll have firm confidence in your own abilities and resources.

It's a proud feeling to be able to say "I'm a U. S. Army Soldier." There's no more honored title anywhere than that. It stands for the finest fighting man on earth.

The work of a combat soldier isn't easy or soft. But it's vitally important to the peace and security of America. There's satisfaction in it. There's good pay — better than in most civilian jobs. There's the opportunity for excellent training in a wide variety of valuable trades and skills. And there are other things money can't buy — such as rugged, clear-eyed health and the lasting comradeship of real men.

If you're 18 to 34 years old (17 with parents' consent), physically sound and mentally keen — if you'd like to prove to yourself that you measure up as a man — talk over the Combat Forces at your nearest U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station today!

STATE FREEDOM TRAIN
NEW YORK State, as well as the nation, will have a Freedom Train. The train will go throughout the state, showing such treasures as the draft of the Emancipation Proclamation in Lincoln's own handwriting, the original of Washington's Farewell Address, and the original resoluti o n
by which New York ratified the Feder a l Constitution.

This is a splendid idea. It enhances the just pride of the people in the possessions of their state, and drives home the sense of the great heritage of freedom w h i c h Americans enjoy.

Not all states are so richly endowed in treasures as New York, but surely all have important documents of their past. They could show the original draft of the state constitution, proclamations signed b y noted governors, records of our wars, autograph letters of distinguished sons of the state—quite enough to merit exhibit. The Freedom Train idea is well worth copying.

TROUBLE IN RUSSIA
EUGEN S. Varga, the leading Russian economist, is facing punishment because of a book he wrote. In it he dared to say that Western capitalism was capable of economic planning, and might live for s o m e years; also that the application of communism to farm ownership in Eastern Europe might slow up output until the peasants adjusted themselves to the new system.

In Russia these things simply are not said or written. Varga has been ou s t e d from his post as director of the S o v i e t Academy's Institute of World Economics and World Politics. Worse may yet befall him as well as the 20 Russian economists who thought there might be something in what he said.

The encouraging feature is that despite the tyranny of the state, there still are Russians brave enough to speak their minds.

RUSSIANS ALSO DIG
THE RUSSIANS are doing other things
besides abusing other countries and consolidating their position in Eastern Europe.
They are finding time to excavate the old-time civilizations of the Russian past.

The most intriguing report is one by the Moscow radio that traces have been found in the Ukraine of the human life of 400,000 years ago. This would be almost as old as the skulls found in Piltown, England and in China near Peking. These are roughly dated as 500,000 years old. The Pilt o w n skull has been called the most valuable object in all England. Whether any b o n e s have been found in the Ukraine is not stated. If they have been, scientists will hope that the iron curtain raised against Western Europe may be raised in their favor.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter

Up to a morning with a hint of Spring in the air and to the West flooded lowlands offering further proof that a change of seasons is not far off. Heard a songbird, but could not identify
it. Took a turn about the yard and a doubt entered my mind about a desire for Summer.
That yard is terrorizingly big and the grass hard to cut. So, all seasons have their drawbacks. Still prefer Summer to ones such as we have been entertaining. Noted the lengthening days, proof that the sun is moving North and set for the big annual push against ice and snow.

Downtown and soon afoot about the town. Met Harold Defenbaugh who has the best birthday celebration idea I ever have heard. He just observes the entire week in which his birthday falls, telling no one the exact day or his age. Chatted with Doc Hedges about the Circle City band and learned it is making great progress. Regular weekly practice is showing in the music.

Coffee with Paul Warden,

Harry Graef and Don Henkle
with no world problems discussed or settled, the chat dealing with gardening and preparation for warm weather. Paul suggested that when hot weather comes that I go back and read some of the things I have said about Winter. He of the opinion that in Winter I like Summer, in Summer I prefer Winter. Well, why should I be different?

Met Jim Stout on his way to a weekly session of the Soldiers' Relief commission.
Learned that the Rifle Club membership effort is meeting with surprising success and that more than a half hundred shooters may be found on the Fairgrounds range this coming Spring.

Chatted with the Rev.
George Troutman, finding him
in good spirits and sounding high praise of his church members' participation in Lenten services. Many of my close friends are members of his congregation and the Rev.
George's influence on them has attracted my attention on many an occasion.

Heard good reports of the ham shoot staged Sunday by the local guard unit at the armory. Have one of the hams at home, won for me by other shooters. Had another half, won by Jake Jacoby, of Logan, and then lost for me by Jake in a shootout. He had invited himself out for dinner just before he lost. After the firing I told him he could recall his invitation.

Home in the late afternoon
and after dinner did take up Bill Mauldin's "Up Front" for another reading. Enjoyed it and laughed as much as at the first reading. A lot in that book for any man who ever wore a uniform in time of war. And considerable for those who were fortunate enough to be on the sidelines.

Talk of reviving Civilian Defense. Just in case. Don't like conditions that make such action necessary, but it is smart to be on the ready side. You may be called on one of these days to prepare to play an active defense role in the event of need.

George El. Sokolsky's These Days

Lord Linlithgow, chairman of the Midland Bank, the largest private bank in England, has this to say:

"The first step towards solving a problem is to see it clearly, to assess its magnitude and to visualize its implications, and here a marked advance can be recorded;
for hardly anyone now dissents from the view that the post-war programme of reconstruction and improvement had outrun
the nation's resources, human, mater i a l and financial. The seemingly almost miraculous achievements of war had led perhaps to over-estimation of the effort that could be sustained when the extremity of peril had been passed. Possibly, moreover, the assistance extended by the United States and Canada—essential to any plan of full economic recovery—had made the task appear less gigantic than in fact it was, having regard to the inroads made by the war upon our physical capacity for production and our external financial assets."

In a word, the planners p l a n n e d t o o much. The professors and the experts set targets for themselves, targets which may or may not be realities, targets which were not even a theoretical basis. They were mystical targets based on faith and hope
but propounded by materialistic socialists.
They always look good in the blue p r i n t stage, but when it came to balancing income and cost, the blueprints did not work.

It is not only war that interferes with roseate plans. It is everything; too much rain; blizzards when coal and oil are lacking; psychological disturbances which produce lack of confidence. Almost anything can upset the best-laid plans of men, of governments, of authors of learned dissertations.

One does not need to go to England to learn that truth. Here in this country, the commodity market goes sour; not distressingly sour, but bad enough to give the stock market and the politicians a fright. The smart boys had had it all worked out that they could keep all the balloons up high—wages, prices, farm prices, rents, taxes—everything that gives the appearance of good times—until, at least, after Election Day. Then would come another day and another story.

Well, it is not working out that way. It is not clear at this moment how it is working.
The Marshall Plan, the budget, the tax-bill all have to be studied again in view of the altered psychological attitude of the buying public. Buyers are waiting for lower prices.

There are expenditures which are essential and pressing: food when one is hungry;
heat when one is cold; clothes when one is in tatters. Such expenditures must be made whatever the price as long as o n e h a s something to pay. Black market, gray market, any market is the same when these essentials press hard.

There are other expenditures which are postponable. For instance, a trip to Miami may be very important and delectable, if the cash is available and the hope fo future high. But it is possible to live, even to be happy, without a trip to Miami. So the hotelkeepers down there are bewailing their fate and Hialeah isn't what it used to be.

With food prices up, it is fortunate that we no longer eat the huge breakfasts our ancestors did. Steak and fried potatoes on top of sausage and pancakes would cut a real hole in the family pocketbook.

Common Childhood Infection

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHENEVER a child, particularly a girl, has a fever whose cause is not apparent, both doctor and parents should suspect pyelitis. This is an infection of that part of the kidney where the excretions collec-
before emptying into the bladder and it is one of the most common of the infections of childhood. Both boys and girls are affected, but the disorder occurs about ten times more often in girls.

Besides fever, the sudden occurrence of bed-wetting is suggestive of the disorder. In babies, the only observable symptoms may be vomiting and diarrhea.

When Symptoms Occur

For these reasons, whenever such symptoms occur, a microscopic examination of the urine should be made. If pyelitis is present, the urine may contain many white blood cells, as well as a small amount of albumin, which helps make the diagnosis.

It is also important to determine the kind of germ producing the infection since it may be due to such various organisms as the colon bacillus, Staphylococcus or Streptococcus and treatment depends on the kind of infection present.

Every Four Hours

It is suggested, if the infection is due to colon bacilli, that one of the sulfonamide preparations be given at once. The drug is given, as a rule, every four hours, day and night. Of course, plenty of fluids should also be administered and the treatment
continued for from four to six days,

depending upon the severity of the illness. For three or four days after the drug has been stopped, the urine should be examined to find out whether or not all of the germs have disappeared. Then, in about two weeks, another examination should be made just to make sure that there is no recurrence of the infection.

Should a recurrence take place,
the treatment must be repeated. If a second relapse occurs, an X-ray examination of the urinary tract must be made to make sure that there is no condition causing blocking of the flow of the urine.

Surgical Treatment

Often, when such a blocking exists, surgical treatment is required to relieve it. The blocking may be in the form of a narrowing of the ureter which leads from the kidney to the bladder. Now and then, there may be a stone present.

In those instances in which the infection is due to the Staphylococcus, penicillin is employed.

Another drug, known as calcium magnesium, may be useful when the infection is due to colon bacilli.

Of course, in each case the doctor will decide which preparation should be used as he determines the type of germ causing the infection.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. B.: I have had acne for six years. Is there any way of getting rid of the scars?

Answer: Plastic operation is occasionally of benefit. Freezing with carbon dioxide snow also has been employed with value in some cases.

WHO GETS THE CREDIT?

THERE are players who learn from experience. But what is it they learn? In many cases, they learn the wrong lesson. With a leaning toward some particular kind of tactics, they keep their wishful eyes open for examples that prove the soundness of their ideas. And they seize upon all sorts of odd developments as such proof, whereas really it is no proof at all. The best thing to do if you have such a partner frequently is to protect yourself against his or her peculiarities. You can never win an argument with such a player as to who gets the credit when a successful result is obtained despite cockeyed bidding or play on his or her part.

You might consider South's bidding cockeyed after the 4-Heart opening, if you did not see North's hand and did not know North. But South knew her, and his reason for not wanting his name used is because he is a lawyer who on advice of his own counsel seeks to avoid an argument with his wife. She takes credit for the slam score they made, and who is he to attribute

it to his own fine bidding and play?

West led the singleton diamond
J, whereupon he saw that if he could bring in all the diamonds and clubs for nine tricks, he still couldn't get game with the two major aces but would have to score one of the queens. And he found out how to do that.

Winning with the diamond Q,
he finessed the club J and laid down the K, which dropped the Q. Now he could complete his plan to develop a gratuitous major suit finesse by aid of the defense. He led to the diamond 10, came back to the A, K and 7, then threw the defense in with the spade 10, hoping that both major kings were properly placed.
East took it with the J and, not wanting to lead into the heart
A-Q, could only return a spade.
He used the 7, which the Q won, assuring the contract. The spade
A, club 8 to the A, club 10 and heart A took the rest of the tricks.

His comment later, about her liking for "cockeyed pre-emptive bids" was: "Now she knows she's still right. Hi-ho!"

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

A VOICE was talking somewhere. It said, "My God!" Catherine knew the voice. It was Stephen Darrell's. She was in a moving vehicle. Her head was a ball of iron packed with dynamite that kept going off in spurts. The spurts were red-hot flame.

Something warm ran into her mouth. She licked it away and forced her eyes open. There was sky above her head, and a tree branch. She was in Stephen Darrell's arms. He was carrying her.
The road was in sight, the road
in front of the cottage that she had tried for so furiously and hadn't made. Recollection came back sickeningly, in bits.

Stephen wasn't going toward the road. He was hugging the cottage wall. He turned into the path leading to the front door. He opened the door, carried her into the living room and put her on the sofa, lowering her carefully.
He sat down beside her, supporting her with an arm around her shoulders. His disengaged hand had a handkerchief in it. He was wiping her cheek, her forehead.
She flinched, cried out.

He said, "There, I won't touch
it." He felt her pulse and nodded.
"Catherine, can you talk?"

She didn't want to. She simply wanted to brace herself against the pain banking away inside her skull, rocking it.

"Try," Stephen urged. "Try and tell me what happened."

She got it out, stumbingly, her swollen lips shaping words thickly.
She had recognized Dutch Pete,
had come here to phone . . .
"Where is he?" She shrank back.

"Dutch Pete won't trouble you again."

Stephen spoke shortly. His voice was grim. He went on talking.
Catherine listened. It was Dutch Pete's outstretched legs she had stumbled over. He couldn't move them out of her way. Dutch Pete was dead.

Catherine looked vacantly in front of her. Dead, dead, dead . . .
Her Uncle John had died and Mike had died—and now Dutch Pete was dead. She didn't care a snap of her fingers for Dutch Pete, but in her mind he had been release, horizon, the end of terror, of night.
She was wrong.

Stephen told her that he had found her lying unconscious beyond Dutch Pete's body on the flagstones outside the kitchen door.
"I called the police. I had to.
You've got to have a doctor. Tell me before the police come—did you hear anyone, see anyone through the windows, or when you first went outside?"

Catherine started to shake her head and the ceiling came down and hit her.

"Never mind." Stephen's voice said hastily from a distance. He got up, got her a glass of water.
She couldn't drink. He went away, came back with wood and paper and kindling and lit a fire. Flames roared up the chimney. Catherine had been cold, now she was burning hot. Stephen took off her coat, resettled her on pillows he brought from her bedroom. He threw off his own leather jacket. Catherine closed her eyes.

When she opened them again
after some little time, it was almost dark out and the room was empty. There were a lot of men somewhere near by, in another room. She could hear their voices.
They must be in the kitchen. It was the police. Lying on a rough picture began to take shape.

When they got there, Dutch Pete, dead, was sprawled half in and half out of the woodbox beyond the kitchen door and directly behind the small white pine. It was the pine tree that had effectually concealed him from her when she started to run past the kitchen door. Dutch Pete had opened the woodbox, the lid was up. He had been in the act of bending over the box when he was struck across the head from behind with a stout piece of locust,
two or three inches thick. The improvised bludgeon was lying on the stones near the box. It had blood and hair on it. In the woodbox, and in his clenched fingers, there was money, twelve hundred and fifty dollars in ten- and twenty-dollar bills.

Someone had salted the woodbox
and the ex-handy man had tum-bled into the prepared trap.

The fire on the living-room hearth still burned brightly. Catherine was bitterly cold again.
Dutch Pete had been killed by someone lying in wait for him, in concealment, close to the house.
He was alive a short time before she ran out through the dining-room windows. The grunt she had heard, the thump, were his death struggles as he was struck and sagged forward . . .

Stephen Darrell had appeared with startling swiftness very soon afterwards; the light painting the windows, all but gone now, had still been fairly full when he carried her in here. Catherine thought.

She thought of something else.
According to the police, there were bills in the woodbox, and when Stephen Darrell was in the village earlier that afternoon, he had just cashed a check. She could still see him, standing outside the bank doors, putting money, a lot of it,
in a wallet, and putting the wallet
into an inside pocket of his leather jacket. He had no coat under it, just a dark-blue shirt.

The jacket was lying across the green chair beside the pine table.
Catherine looked at folds of worn brown leather. She got up, swayed, and almost fell. She had to get across the floor, had to set her dreadful suspicion at rest.

It wasn't Dutch Pete who mattered so much, but whoever had killed her Uncle John and then Mike . . .

It took incredible effort and what seemed like a quarter of an hour to negotiate twelve feet of space. She went from sofa-end to staircase to wall, a table was at the green chair. She sagged down into the chair's embrace, dragged the leather jacket across her knees.

A pause for rest. She found the inside pocket, managed to get the wallet out. Another pause—she opened the wallet.

The sheaf of currency she had seen Stephen stuffing into the wallet earlier wasn't there. It was gone. The only money in the pigskin envelope, with Stephen's initials on it in gold, was a single ten-dollar bill.

She was still sitting there, with the wallet clasped loosely in nerveless fingers, when footsteps sounded along the passage and Inspector McKee walked into the room.

The agony was frightful. She had done it. She was the one who had delivered Stephen into the inspector's hands. That was what Catherine thought at first. McKee undecided her. He knew all about the check Stephen had cashed in town.

Summoned, Stephen readily admitted cashing an eleven-hundred-dollar check just before the bank closed. He absolutely refused to say what he had done with the money. He did deny, emphatically, that the bills in the woodbox were his.

Standing on the hearth, tall and lounging, in his familiar indolent attitude, his dark head a little on one side, Stephen said, "I'm sorry, Inspector, but it's a private matter, nobody's business but my own
. . . and stuck to it."

Hours later, the clash between the two men kept repeating itself in Catherine's aching brain. "You're in a bad spot, Mr. Darrell." "I can't help that." "There's such a thing as tracing bills . . ." A shrug.
"Go ahead." "If you didn't put that cash in the woodbox why not say what you did with the eleven hundred dollars you had when you left the bank?" "My money's my own to do with as I please. That money you found is not mine."

Then and there nothing very much actually had happened. Stephen's story was taken down in shorthand by a man in plain clothes
the Inspector had brought up with him from New York. He said he had been walking toward the Wardwell house from town, when,
from a distance, he saw the lights on here. He had come to investigate, idly. "I thought the others might have walked over." When he reached the cottage, Catherine was lying unconscious, face down,
on the stones outside the kitchen door with the Wardwell ex-handy man sprawled near her. "The fellow was dead. I didn't even know who he was."

Asked whether he had seen anyone in the vicinity of the little house, in the fields, along the road,
as he approached the cottage, he said, "No." He said it sharply, shortly.

His tone put new hope into Catherine. She knew how he felt. He had already declared, to her, that he wasn't going to do the police's work for them. If he had seen someone, she thought, recalling her own earlier emotion, he probably couldn't bring himself to turn whoever it was over to the police.

That brought her back on the gorgeous knot. Someone he knew . . . Someone she knew . . . One of them . . .

In ordinary cases, always in-presented to a man unless it is the president of the United

STATE FREEDOM TRAIN

NEW YORK State, as well as the nation, will have a Freedom Train. The train will go throughout the state, showing such treasures as the draft of the Emancipation Proclamation in Lincoln's own handwriting, the original of Washington's Farewell Address, and the original resolution by which New York ratified the Federal Constitution.

This is a splendid idea. It enhances the just pride of the people in the possessions of their state, and drives home the sense of the great heritage of freedom which Americans enjoy.

Not all states are so richly endowed in treasures as New York, but surely all have important documents of their past. They could show the original draft of the state constitution, proclamations signed by noted governors, records of our wars, autograph letters of distinguished sons of the state—quite enough to merit exhibit. The Freedom Train idea is well worth copying.

TROUBLE IN RUSSIA

EUGEN S. Varga, the leading Russian economist, is facing punishment because of a book he wrote. In it he dared to say that Western capitalism was capable of economic planning, and might live for some years; also that the application of communism to farm ownership in Eastern Europe might slow up output until the peasants adjusted themselves to the new system.

In Russia these things simply are not said or written. Varga has been ousted from his post as director of the Soviet Academy's Institute of World Economics and World Politics. Worse may yet befall him as well as the 20 Russian economists who thought there might be something in what he said.

The encouraging feature is that despite the tyranny of the state, there still are Russians brave enough to speak their minds.

RUSSIANS ALSO DIG

THE RUSSIANS are doing other things besides abusing other countries and consolidating their position in Eastern Europe. They are finding time to excavate the old-time civilizations of the Russian past.

The most intriguing report is one by the Moscow radio that traces have been found in the Ukraine of the human life of 400,000 years ago. This would be almost as old as the skulls found in Piltown, England and in China near Peking. These are roughly dated as 500,000 years old. The Piltown skull has been called the most valuable object in all England. Whether any bones have been found in the Ukraine is not stated. If they have been, scientists will hope that the iron curtain raised against Western Europe may be raised in their favor.

Up to a morning with a hint of Spring in the air and to the West flooded lowlands offering further proof that a change of seasons is not far off. Heard a songbird, but could not identify it. Took a turn about the yard and a doubt entered my mind about a desire for Summer. That yard is terrorizingly big and the grass hard to cut. So, all seasons have their drawbacks. Still prefer Summer to ones such as we have been entertaining. Noted the lengthening days, proof that the sun is moving North and set for the big annual push against ice and snow.

Downtown and soon afoot about the town. Met Harold Defenbaugh who has the best birthday celebration idea I ever have heard. He just observes the entire week in which his birthday falls, telling no one the exact day or his age. Chatted with Doc Hedges about the Circle City band and learned it is making great progress. Regular weekly practice is showing in the music.

Coffee with Paul Warden,

Harry Graef and Don Henkle with no world problems discussed or settled, the chat dealing with gardening and preparation for warm weather. Paul suggested that when hot weather comes that I go back and read some of the things I have said about Winter. He of the opinion that in Winter I like Summer, in Summer I prefer Winter. Well, why should I be different?

Met Jim Stout on his way to a weekly session of the Soldiers' Relief commission. Learned that the Rifle Club membership effort is meeting with surprising success and that more than a half hundred shooters may be found on the Fairgrounds range this coming Spring.

Chatted with the Rev. George Troutman, finding him in good spirits and sounding high praise of his church members' participation in Lenten services. Many of my close friends are members of his congregation and the Rev. George's influence on them has attracted my attention on many an occasion.

These Days

Lord Linlithgow, chairman of the Midland Bank, the largest private bank in England, has this to say:

"The first step towards solving a problem is to see it clearly, to assess its magnitude and to visualize its implications, and here a marked advance can be recorded; for hardly anyone now dissents from the view that the post-war programme of reconstruction and improvement had outrun the nation's resources, human, material and financial. The seemingly almost miraculous achievements of war had led perhaps to over-estimation of the effort that could be sustained when the extremity of peril had been passed. Possibly, moreover, the assistance extended by the United States and Canada—essential to any plan of full economic recovery—had made the task appear less gigantic than in fact it was, having regard to the inroads made by the war upon our physical capacity for production and our external financial assets."

In a word, the planners planned too much. The professors and the experts set targets for themselves, targets which may or may not be realities, targets which have not even a theoretical basis. They were mystical targets based on faith and hope but propounded by materialistic socialists. They always look good in the blueprint stage, but when it came to balancing income and cost, the blueprints did not work.

It is not only war that interferes with roosevelt plans. It is everything; too much rain; blizzards when coal and oil are lacking; psychological disturbances which produce lack of confidence. Almost anything can upset the best-laid plans of men, of governments, of authors of learned dissertations.

One does not need to go to England to learn that truth. Here in this country, the commodity market goes sour; not distressingly sour, but bad enough to give the stock market and the politicians a fright. The smart boys had had it all worked out that they could keep all the balloons up high—wages, prices, farm prices, rents, taxes—everything that gives the appearance of good times—until, at least, after Election Day. Then would come another day and another story.

Well, it is not working out that way. It is not clear at this moment how it is working. The Marshall Plan, the budget, the tax-bill all have to be studied again in view of the altered psychological attitude of the buying public. Buyers are waiting for lower prices.

There are expenditures which are essential and pressing: food when one is hungry; heat when one is cold; clothes when one is in tatters. Such expenditures must be made whatever the price as long as one has something to pay. Black market, gray market, any market is the same when these essentials press hard.

There are other expenditures which are postponable. For instance, a trip to Miami may be very important and delectable, if the cash is available and the hope to future high. But it is possible to live, even to be happy, without a trip to Miami. So the hotelkeepers down there are bawling their fate and Hialeah isn't what it used to be.

With food prices up, it is fortunate that we no longer eat the huge breakfasts our ancestors did. Steak and fried potatoes on top of sausage and pancakes would cut a real hole in the family pocketbook.

ham shoot staged Sunday by the local guard unit at the armory. Have one of the hams at home, won for me by other shooters. Home in the late afternoon and after dinner did take up Bill Mauldin's "Up Front" for another reading. Enjoyed it and laughed as much as at the first reading. A lot in that book for any man who ever wore a uniform in time of war. And considerable for those who were fortunate enough to be on the sidelines.

Talk of reviving Civilian Defense. Just in case. Don't like conditions that make such action necessary, but it is smart to be on the ready side. You may be called on one of these days to prepare to play an active defense role in the event of need.

Common Childhood Infection

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

WHENEVER a child, particularly a girl, has a fever whose cause is not apparent, both doctor and parents should suspect pyelitis. This is an infection of that part of the kidney where the excretions collect before emptying into the bladder. It is one of the most common of the infections of childhood. Both boys and girls are affected, but the disorder occurs about ten times more often in girls.

Besides fever, the sudden occurrence of bed-wetting is suggestive of the disorder. In babies, the only observable symptoms may be vomiting and diarrhea.

When Symptoms Occur

For these reasons, whenever such symptoms occur, a microscopic examination of the urine should be made. If pyelitis is present, the urine may contain many white blood cells, as well as a small amount of albumin, which helps make the diagnosis.

It is also important to determine the kind of germ producing the infection since it may be due to such various organisms as the colon bacillus, Staphylococcus or Streptococcus and treatment depends on the kind of infection present.

Every Four Hours

It is suggested, if the infection is due to colon bacilli, that one of the sulfonamide preparations be given at once. The drug is given, as a rule, every four hours, day and night. Of course, plenty of fluids should also be administered and the treatment continued for from four to six days, depending upon the severity of the illness. For three or four days after the drug has been stopped, the urine should be examined to find out whether or not all of the germs have disappeared. Then, in about two weeks, another examination should be made just to make sure that there is no recurrence of the infection.

Should a recurrence take place, the treatment must be repeated. If a second relapse occurs, an X-ray examination of the urinary tract must be made to make sure that there is no condition causing blocking of the flow of the urine.

Surgical Treatment

Often, when such a blocking exists, surgical treatment is required to relieve it. The blocking may be in the form of a narrowing of the ureter which leads from the kidney to the bladder. Now and then, there may be a stone present.

In those instances in which the infection is due to the Staphylococcus, penicillin is employed.

Another drug, known as calcium mandelate, may be useful when the infection is due to colon bacilli.

Of course, in each case the doctor will decide which preparation should be used as he determines the type of germ causing the infection.

WHO GETS THE CREDIT?

THERE are players who learn from experience. But what is it they learn? In many cases, they learn the wrong lesson. With a leaning toward some particular kind of tactics, they keep their wishful eyes open for examples that prove the soundness of their ideas. And they seize upon all sorts of odd developments as such proof, whereas really it is no proof at all. The best thing to do if you have such a partner frequently is to try to protect yourself against his or her peculiarities. You can never win an argument with such a player as to who gets the credit when a successful result is obtained despite cockeyed bidding or play on his or her part.

Winning with the diamond Q, he finessed the club J and laid down the K, which dropped the Q. Now he could complete his plan to develop a gratuitous major suit finesse by aid of the defense. He led to the diamond 10, came back to the A, K and 7, then threw the defense in with the spade 10, hoping that both the major kings were properly placed. East took it with the J and, not wanting to lead into the heart A-Q, could only return a spade. He used the 7, which the Q won, assuring the contract. The spade A, club 8 to the A, club 10 and heart A took the rest of the tricks.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

A VOICE was talking somewhere. It said, "My God!" Catherine knew the voice. It was Stephen Darrell's. She was in a moving vehicle. Her head was a ball of iron packed with dynamite that kept going off in spurts. The spurts were red-hot flame.

Something warm ran into her mouth. She licked it away and forced her eyes open. There was sky above her head, and a tree branch. She was in Stephen Darrell's arms. He was carrying her. The road was in sight, the road in front of the cottage that she had tried for so furiously and hadn't made. Recollection came back sickeningly, in bits.

Stephen wasn't going toward the road. He was hugging the cottage wall. He turned into the path leading to the front door. He opened the door, carried her into the living room and put her on the sofa, lowering her carefully. He sat down beside her, supporting her with an arm around her shoulders. His disengaged hand had a handkerchief in it. He was wiping her cheek, her forehead. She flinched, cried out.

He said, "There, I won't touch it." He felt her pulse and nodded. "Catherine, can you talk?"

She didn't want to. She simply wanted to brace herself against the pain banging away inside her skull, rocking it.

"Try," Stephen urged. "Try and tell me what happened."

She got it out, stammeringly, her swollen lips shaping words thickly. She had recognized Dutch Pete, she had come here to phone. "Where is he?" She shrank back.

"Dutch Pete won't trouble you again." Stephen spoke shortly. His voice was grim. He went on talking. Catherine listened. It was Dutch Pete's outstretched legs she had stumbled over. He couldn't move them out of her way. Dutch Pete was dead.

Catherine looked vacantly in front of her. Dead, dead, dead. Her Uncle John had died and Mike had died—and now Dutch Pete was dead. She didn't care a snap of her fingers for Dutch Pete, but in her mind he had been release, horizon, the end of terror, of night. She was wrong.

Stephen told her that he had found her lying unconscious beyond Dutch Pete's body on the flagstones outside the kitchen door. "I called the police. I had to. You've got to have a doctor. Tell me before the police come—did you hear anyone, see anyone through the windows, or when you first went outside?"

Catherine started to shake her head and the ceiling came down and hit her.

"Never mind," Stephen's voice said hastily from a distance. He got up, got her a glass of water she couldn't drink. He went away, came back with wood and paper and kindling and lit a fire. Flames roared up the chimney. Catherine had been cold, now she was burning hot. Stephen took off her coat, resettled her on pillows he brought from her bedroom. He threw off his own leather jacket. Catherine closed her eyes.

When she opened them again after some little time, it was almost dark out and the room was empty. There were a lot of men somewhere near by, in another room. She could hear their voices. They must be in the kitchen. It was the police. Listening, a rough picture began to take shape.

When they got there, Dutch Pete, dead, was sprawled half in and half out of the woodbox beyond the kitchen door and directly behind the small white pine. It was the pine tree that had effectually concealed him from her when she started to run past the kitchen door. Dutch Pete had opened the woodbox, the lid was up. He had been in the act of bending over the box when he was struck across the head from behind with a stout piece of locust, two or three inches thick. The improvised bludgeon was lying on the stones near the box. It had blood and hair on it. In the woodbox, and in his clenched fingers, there was money, twelve hundred and fifty dollars in ten- and twenty-dollar bills.

Someone had sailed the woodbox and the ex-handy man had tumbled into the prepared trap. The fire on the living-room hearth still burned brightly. Catherine was bitterly cold again. Dutch Pete had been killed by someone lying in wait for him, in concealment, close to the house. He was alive a short time before she ran out through the dining-room windows. The grunt she had heard, the thump, were his death struggles as he was struck and sagged forward.

Stephen Darrell had appeared with startling swiftness very soon afterwards; the light painting the windows, all but gone now, had been fairly full when he carried her in here, Catherine thought. She thought of something else. According to the police, there were bills in the woodbox, and when Stephen Darrell was in the village earlier that afternoon, he had just cashed a check. She could still see him, standing outside the bank doors, putting money, a lot of it, in a wallet, and putting the wallet into an inside pocket of his leather jacket. He had no coat under it, just a dark-blue shirt.

The jacket was lying across the green chair beside the pine table. Catherine looked at folds of worn brown leather. She got up, swayed, and almost fell. She had to get across the floor, had to set her dreadful suspicion at rest.

It wasn't Dutch Pete who mattered so much, but whoever had killed her Uncle John and then Mike.

It took incredible effort and what seemed like a quarter of an hour to negotiate twelve feet of space. She went from sofa-end to staircase to wall, to table, was at the green chair. She sagged down into the chair's embrace, dragged the leather jacket across her knees.

A pause for rest. She found the inside pocket, managed to get the wallet out. Another pause—she opened the wallet.

The sheaf of currency she had seen Stephen stuffing into the wallet earlier wasn't there. It was gone. The only money in the pigskin envelope, with Stephen's initials on it in gold, was a single ten-dollar bill.

She was still sitting there, with the wallet clasped loosely in nerveless fingers, when footsteps sounded along the passage and Inspector McKee walked into the room.

The agony was frightful. She had done it. She was the one who had delivered Stephen into the inspector's hands. That was what Catherine thought at first. McKee undressed her. He knew all about the check Stephen had cashed in town.

Summoned, Stephen readily admitted cashing an eleven-hundred-dollar check just before the bank closed. He absolutely refused to say what he had done with the money. He did deny, emphatically, that the bills in the woodbox were his.

Standing on the hearth, tall and loquacious, in his familiar indolent attitude, his dark head a little on one side, Stephen said, "I'm sorry, Inspector, but it's a private matter, nobody's business but my own. . . . and stuck to it."

Hours later, the clash between the two men kept repeating itself in Catherine's aching brain. "You're in a bad spot, Mr. Darrell. I can't help that." "There's such a thing as tracing bills. . . . A shrug. "Go ahead." "If you didn't put that cash in the woodbox why not say what you did with the eleven hundred dollars you had when you left the bank?" "My money's my own to do with as I please. That money you found is not mine."

Then and there nothing very much actually had happened. Stephen's story was taken down in shorthand by a man in plain clothes the inspector had brought up with him from New York. He said he had been walking toward the Wardwell house from town, when, from a distance, he saw the lights on here. He had come to investigate, idly. "I thought the others might have walked over." When he reached the cottage, Catherine was lying unconscious, face down, on the stones outside the kitchen door with the Wardwell ex-handy man sprawled near her. "The fellow was dead. I didn't even know who he was."

Asked whether he had seen anyone in the vicinity of the little house, in the fields, along the road, as he approached the cottage, he said, "No." He said it sharply, shortly.

His tone put new hope into Catherine. She knew how he felt. He had already declared, to her, that he wasn't going to do the police's work for them. If he had seen someone, she thought, recalling her own earlier emotion, he probably couldn't bring himself to turn whoever it was over to the police.

That brought her back on the gordian knot. Someone he knew. . . . Someone she knew. . . . of them. . . .

No woman is ever presented to a man unless it is the president of the United States, a royal personage or a church dignitary.

Former Model Speaks On 'Fabrics' At Monday Club Session

Nominating Committee Named

Mrs. A. Hulse Hayes was selected chairman of the nominating committee to prepare a slate of officers to be elected by members of Monday Club at its regular meeting Monday evening in trustee's room of Memorial hall. She will be assisted by Mrs. Tom A. Renick and Mrs. Edwin S. Shane.

Mrs. Melvin Kiger, president, was in the chair for the routine business session. Miss Nell Oesterle and Mrs. Joseph Bell were elected to active membership. Ten dollars was voted toward the Red Cross solicitation.

Mrs. Anna Chandler, program chairman for the meeting, introduced Miss Kay Allen, fabric stylist in a Columbus department store. Miss Allen has been associated in fabric promotions for the past 11 years. Prior to this vocation, she was a Powers model.

Miss Allen chose for her subject "Fabrics The Foundation of All Fashions". She told the club that "five fabrics constitute the foundation—cotton, linen, silk, wool and synthetics. The various weaves are plain, twill, gauze, satin, pile, basket, figure and double; of these plain, twill and satin are used most."

She told the group "the most drastic changes in fashions have come this year. The current 'new look' is no more because now we have 'the accepted look.'"

Polio Fund Benefits

Scioto Chapel Ladies Aid members donated $10 to the March of Dimes when they met in the Robtown parish house. Mrs. Clara Hudson presided as the group opened the meeting singing a hymn. The Rev. O. W. Smith offered prayer.

Readings were given by Mrs. Bernice Carmichael, Mrs. Tommy Brooks, Mrs. Alice Ward and Mrs. Hudson. Mrs. Clara Hudson played a piano solo. Contests were conducted by Alice Ward, Mrs. Carmichael and Mrs. Harold Fee. Cooperative lunch was enjoyed by 14 members.

Husbands Party Slated In March By Study Club

Mrs. Frank Marion and Mrs. Gladden Troutman were co-hostesses for the meeting of Child Study Club conducted Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Charles Walters on route 4.

Mrs. Fritz Sieverts presided for a business session. Members voted $5 be given the Red Cross chapter. Mrs. L. D. Ridenour and Mrs. James Sampson were guests for the evening.

Plans were set for a "husbands party" in place of a regular meeting in March. They will have a dinner in the Wardell party home, Williamsport pike, with Dr. Floyd Foust from Columbus invited as guest speaker. Mrs. Sterling Poling read an interesting paper entitled "Your Child Is You." She stated: "Your child is you or your child is what he is because of you—not a photographic likeness, but a composite of what you are—what you wish you were and what you wish for your child."

She told her listeners they should "never pretend to be something you are not; make yourself something to be proud of and then you won't have to pretend. To be happily secure, every child must feel that somewhere he is wanted and desired for himself alone—to someone he's of supreme importance."

A desert course carrying out the Valentine motif was served by the hostesses during the social hour.

Honest, I Didn't Know USED FATS WERE STILL BADLY NEEDED!

Lady, where have you been? Used fats are needed now more than ever, because the shortage of fats and oils today is the greatest in the world's history. Our government warns us that the supply simply cannot meet today's industrial needs. You can help prevent this supply from getting too low by continuing to turn in your used fats.

You say you re-use them for cooking! Fine! But even the drops left after that are worth salvaging. Then how about melting down fat trimmings, skimming gravies? Those tricks yield plenty!

And come to think of it, what other kitchen waste can you convert into good hard cash? It's a point to remember, these days of high food costs! You know, prices butchers pay for used fats are up, on the average. So please... don't throw your fats away. Save 'em, and turn 'em in!

Former Model Speaks On 'Fabrics' At Monday Club Session

Nominating Committee Named

Mrs. A. Hulse Hayes was selected chairman of the nominating committee to prepare a slate of officers to be elected by members of Monday Club at its regular meeting Monday evening in trustee's room of Memorial hall. She will be assisted by Mrs. Tom A. Renick and Mrs. Edwin S. Shane.

Mrs. Melvin Kiger, president, was in the chair for the routine business session. Miss Nell Osterle and Mrs. Joseph Bell were elected to active membership. Ten dollars was voted toward the Red Cross solicitation.

Mrs. Anna Chandler, program chairman for the meeting, introduced Miss Kay Allen, fabric stylist in a Columbus department store. Miss Allen has been associated in fabric promotions for the past 11 years. Prior to this vocation, she was a Powers model.

Miss Allen chose for her subject "Fabrics The Foundation of All Fashions." She told the club that "five fabrics constitute the foundation—cotton, linen, silk, wool and synthetics. The various weaves are plain, twill, gauze, satin, pile, basket, figure and double; of these plain, twill and satin are used most."

She told the group "the most drastic changes in fashions have come this year. The current 'new look' is no more because now we have 'the accepted look.'"

Polio Fund Benefits

Scioto Chapel Ladies Aid members donated $10 to the March of Dimes when they met in the Robtown parish house. Mrs. Clara Hudson presided as the group opened the meeting singing a hymn. The Rev. O. W. Smith offered prayer.

Husbands' Party Slated In March By Study Club

Mrs. Frank Marion and Mrs. Gladden Troutman were co-hostesses for the meeting of Child Study Club conducted Monday evening in the home of Mrs. Charles Walters on route 4.

Plans were set for a "husbands' party" in place of a regular meeting in March. They will have a dinner in the Wardell party home, Williamsport pike, with Dr. Floyd Foust from Columbus invited as guest speaker.

Mrs. Sterling Poling read an interesting paper entitled "Your Child Is You." She stated: "Your child is you or your child is what he is because of you—not a photographic likeness, but a composite of what you are—what you wish you were and what you wish for your child."

She told her listeners they should "never pretend to be something you are not; make yourself something to be proud of and then you won't have to pretend. To be happily secure, every child must feel that somewhere he is wanted and desired for himself alone—to someone he's of supreme importance."

A desert course carrying out the Valentine motif was served by the hostesses during the social hour.

Gatti Crew Is Nearing Destination

Mountains Of Moon To Be Objective

By JAMES POWERS
BRITISH EAST AFRICA, Feb. 17.—We reached our first real objective in the Gatti-Hallcrafters Expedition to the Mountains of the Moon with our arrival in the port of Mombasa.

The real drama and adventure of this expedition will begin when we head inland and then cut south to Tanganyika, where our initial goal is Mount Kilimanjaro, the 19,780-foot peak.

Mombasa is leased to the British and to all intents and purposes is part of Kenya Colony. It is especially busy and is the funnel through which British military equipment is being evacuated from India, Palestine and the Middle East.

INLAND about 65 miles is a budding city—that only a few months ago was a whistle stop on the Mombasa-Nairobi railroad. It is to be the storage depot for virtually all the military equipment the British have in the Middle and Near East.

Despite the unusual activity in the port we are able to get our equipment cleared and finally on the way.

First comes a station wagon with Commander Attilio Gatti. This is followed by a light truck which pulls Mrs. Gatti's house trailer. Then comes another truck.

Two heavier trucks follow them, two KB-5's, each pulling a 10,000 watt power generating unit to supply electricity for our camps.

Behind these comes two KB-35's, one pulling a house trailer fitted up as a mobile "shack on wheels," for radio receiving and transmitting, and as a photographic lab for spot development of pictures.

The photographers ride in the first station wagon with Gatti so they can be on the alert for pictures.

PICTURE the worst dirt road you have ever driven over in the United States. Then add a layer of uncrushed rock, and unroll it in a single lane, often hedged by trees, twisting up, down and over hills.

I drove out of Mombasa on a KB-5 power unit. Just one of the complications was that who ever serviced the trucks neglected to drain from the radiators the anti-freeze used when they were loaded in New York in November.

We reached Kwalli, the seat of the government Boma and the district commissioner, and then struck off on another dirt road for the camp site only about three miles beyond.

We came on a break in the trees and a place where after several hundred feet of short grass the plateau fell abruptly away and beyond we could see rolling hills for miles until they disappeared into the mists. You could see the island, some of the land-locked bays around it and in the background the white of great breakers.

IT SEEMED awfully quiet for a moment as the cars came up and ground slowly to a halt. It was the end of our first safari and our home for the next few weeks. But in the silence I heard almost unconsciously what sounded like a drum, far away but insistent and clear.

Then I realized it was a drum. It was a tom-tom. I was in Africa.

Snowfall Covers Missing Akronite

AKRON, Feb. 17.—The body of William C. Sager, 51, who had been missing from his Akron home since Jan. 24, was found last night under a snowdrift a short distance from his house. Sager's widow, Magdalen, told police that Sager left home that day to go to a neighborhood store and never returned. His abandoned car was found shortly after.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Sutter, neighbors of the Sagers, were driving in the area when Mrs. Sutter saw Sager's body lying in a ditch where it had been covered by heavy snow. Detectives reported there were no marks of violence on the body.

AN ATTACK of rheumatic fever several years ago left Betty Woolridge, 21, of Canton, with a clogged valve to her heart. In a life or death operation, Dr. Horace J. Smithy, assistant professor of surgery at the Medical College of North Carolina, cut the scarred valve and Betty survived. Only one other human being is known to have survived such a delicate operation. Betty, recovering, is shown in a Charleston, S. C., hospital. Dr. Smithy is at the left.

Several Ways Cited For Lice Extermination

The poultry grower has a choice of several effective methods for treating lice. Which one he uses will depend on his preference or the availability of remedies, according to Washington State college. Whatever method is used, birds should be examined 10 days to two weeks after treatment to see if any lice still are present.

second treatment usually is necessary and should be applied about two weeks after the first treatment.

One method is to fumigate with a 40 percent nicotine sulfate solution. In this case directions of the manufacturer should be followed.

Lice power also is effective. These may be DDT, nicotine sulfate or commercial sodium fluoride or sodium fluosilicate. These may be applied by the pinch method. It consists of placing on the skin of each fowl about 10 pinches, rubbing into the breast, each thigh, below the vent, on each side of the back, on the neck and head and on the underside of each outspread wing. INS Foreign Observer

Great Britain's decision to join in the "war of documents" now raging between the United States and Soviet Russia promises today to evoke the memory of a suave British diplomat who toward the end of his life confessed himself to be the most baffled man the world has ever known.

He was Sir Neville Henderson, who died in 1942, broken in spirit and completely disillusioned.

It had been his task on behalf of Great Britain to try and talk Adolf Hitler, Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Joachim Von Ribbentrop out of starting World War II.

Henderson broke himself completely on the unyielding rocks of Nazi determination and Hitlerite double-dealing. He was British ambassador to Berlin at the time that war broke out.

HE SPENT virtually all of his time between the Munich pact of 1938 and the German invasion of Poland in 1939 trying to find out the course of German policy and forestall war if possible.

No more tragic, futile story ever has been told than the one set forth in Henderson's own book which he so aptly titled "Failure of a Mission."

From the beginning Henderson found it virtually impossible to talk to, much less deal with Hitler and Ribbentrop. So he did the completely logical thing and tried to win the confidence of Goering.

The cultured Briton had little use for the fat field marshal's grossness and mental peculiarities. But it was of some diplomatic value to visit frequently at Karinhall or one of Goering's hunting lodges.

He found out, for example, that German rearmament was a very real thing and that the Hitler crowd was fanatically determined to have its "Lebensraum" and more—regardless of whether that meant plunging the whole world into war.

BUT HIS BOOK bristles with disappointments, such as finding Goering in a mood where he would talk only of women, art treasures or pigsticking and stubbornly ignored all realities.

And how Ribbentrop as foreign minister called him in to read off ultimatums at such breakneck speeds that even secretaries and stenographers well versed in German could not understand what he was saying.

Henderson already has given a clear picture of Nazi diplomatic operations. But there doubt-

WILLOUGHBY, Feb. 17.—The courage of William Lash, which enabled him to survive the Bataan death march, was severely tested yesterday again in a fire which destroyed the home of his family in Willoughby Township.

COLUMBIA GAS SYSTEM IN 1947

From The Annual Report of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation

By most standards, 1947 was a highly successful year for the Columbia Gas System. The subsidiary operating companies delivered more gas to their customers than ever before. Gas earnings reached the highest in history. And more money was distributed in dividends than has been paid for many years.

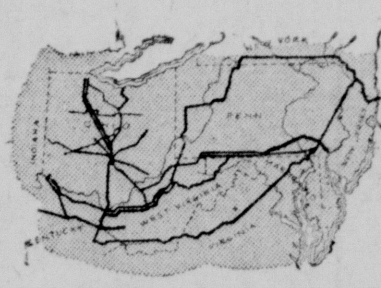

But while these results were achieved, the System did not escape the inflation that beset most business in this country. Costs were higher, materials hard to get. And because of shortages, we, in turn, were un-

In the months to come, the facilities of this public service will grow. More and more gas from the more than adequate reserves will flow through Columbia's lines.

And because the gas we furnish has become such a vital force in the economic development of the communities we serve, we have an abiding sense of responsibility in bringing a constantly improving service to them.

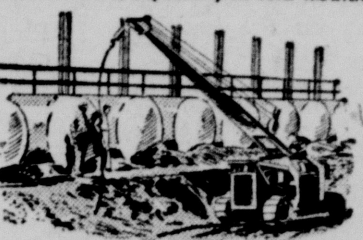

Columbia serves natural gas to a million homes and businesses in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland; and delivers gas to other public utilities in this area which, in turn, sell gas to another 800,000 customers.

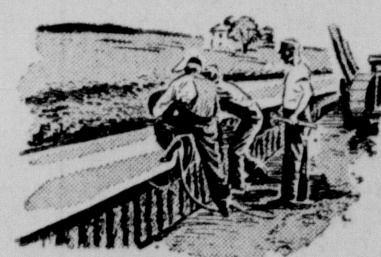

More gas than ever before was wanted by and delivered to those customers in 1947. There were 26 days in December when the System delivered more than a billion cubic feet a day, and for the year, Columbia delivered a total of 231 billion cubic feet, a gain of 18.5 per cent over 1946.

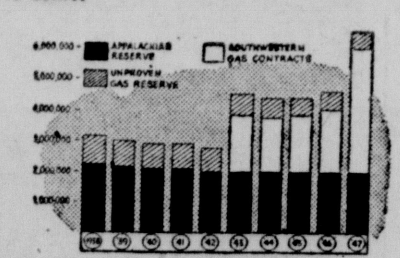

The tremendous peaks created by this unprecedented demand were met in part by building 12 liquefied petroleum plants; by storing more gas underground; by bringing more gas into the System from Southwest fields in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Kansas. Yet these increases were not enough to meet all the wants of the System's customers, especially in cold weather.

Columbia spent $30,594,411 for production, storage, transmission and distribution facilities in 1947. To meet the still increasing demand for this clean, convenient low-cost fuel, the System plans to spend an additional $111,000,000 in 1948, 1949 and 1950.

Even with 1947 sales at an all time high, gas reserves of the System increased to an estimated 6 1/2 trillion feet, 2 1/2 trillion of which are in the Appalachian area and 4 trillion under contract from Southwest fields—enough natural gas to supply existing and prospective customers for many years to come.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA, Feb. 17.—We reached our first real objective in the Gatti-Hallier Expedition to the Mountains of the Moon with our arrival in the port of Mombasa.

The real drama and adventure of this expedition will begin when we head inland and then cut south to Tanganyika, where our initial goal is Mount Kilimanjaro, the 19,780-foot peak.

Mombasa is leased to the British and to all intents and purposes is part of Kenya Colony. It is especially busy and is the funnel through which British military equipment is being evacuated from India, Palestine and the Middle East.

INLAND about 65 miles is a budding city—that only a few months ago was a whistle stop on the Mombasa-Nairobi railroad. It is to be the storage depot for virtually all the military equipment the British have in the Middle and Near East.

Despite the unusual activity in the port we are able to get our equipment cleared and finally on the way.

First comes a station wagon with Commander Attilio Gatti. This is followed by a light truck which pulls Mrs. Gatti's house trailer. Then comes another truck.

Two heavier trucks follow them, two KB-5's, each pulling a 10,000 watt power generating unit to supply electricity for our camps.

Behind these comes two KB-38's, one pulling a house trailer fitted up as a mobile "shack on wheels," for radio receiving and transmitting, and as a photographic lab for spot development of pictures.

The photographers ride in the first station wagon with Gatti so they can be on the alert for pictures.

PICTURE the worst dirt road you have ever driven over in the United States. Then add a layer of uncrushed rock, and unroll it in a single lane, often hedged by trees, twisting up, down and over hills.

I drove out of Mombasa on a KB-5 power unit. Just one of the complications was that who ever serviced the trucks neglected to drain from the radiators the anti-freeze used when they were loaded in New York in November.

We reached Kwalli, the seat of the government Boma and the district commissioner, and then struck off on another dirt road for the camp site only about three miles beyond.

We came on a break in the trees and a place where after several hundred feet of short grass the plateau fell abruptly away and beyond we could see rolling hills for miles until they disappeared into the mists. You could see the island, some of the land-locked bays around it and in the background the white of great breakers.

IT SEEMED awfully quiet for a moment as the cars came up and ground slowly to a halt. It was the end of our first safari and our home for the next few weeks.

But in the silence I heard almost unconsciously what sounded like a drum, far away but insistent and clear.

Then I realized it was a drum. It was a tom-tom. I was in Africa.

Snowfall Covers Missing Akronite

AKRON, Feb. 17.—The body of William C. Sager, 51, who had been missing from his Akron home since Jan. 24, was found last night under a snowdrift a short distance from his house.

Sager's widow, Magdalene, told police that Sager left home that day to go to a neighborhood store and never returned. His abandoned car was found shortly after.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Sutter, neighbors of the Sagers, were driving in the area when Mrs. Sutter saw Sager's body lying in a ditch where it had been covered by heavy snow. Detectives reported there were no marks of violence on the body.

AN ATTACK of rheumatic fever several years ago left Betty Woolridge, 21, of Canton, with a clogged valve to her heart. In a life or death operation, Dr. Horace J. Smithy, assistant professor of surgery at the Medical College of North Carolina, cut the scarred valve and Betty survived. Only one other human being is known to have survived such a delicate operation. Betty, recovering, is shown in a Charleston, S. C., hospital. Dr. Smithy is at the left.

Several Ways Cited For Lice Extermination

The poultry grower has a choice of several effective methods for treating lice. Which one he uses will depend on his preference or the availability of remedies, according to Washington State college. Whatever method is used, birds should be examined 10 days to two weeks after treatment to see if any lice still are present.

Louse eggs are not always destroyed by the treatment used, and these will hatch later. A second treatment usually is necessary and should be applied about two weeks after the first treatment.

One method is to fumigate with a 40 percent nicotine sulfate solution. In this case directions of the manufacturer should be followed.

Lice power also is effective. These may be DDT, nicotine sulfate or commercial sodium fluoride or sodium fluosilicate. These may be applied by the pinch method. It consists of placing on the skin of each fowl about 10 pinches, rubbing into the breast, each thigh, below the vent, on each side of the back, on the neck and head and on the underside of each outspread wing. The fowls also may be dusted, sprayed with dusting material or

Great Britain's decision to join in the "war of documents" now raging between the United States and Soviet Russia promises today to evoke the memory of a suave British diplomat who toward the end of his life confessed himself to be the most baffled man the world has ever known.

He was Sir Neville Henderson, who died in 1942, broken in spirit and completely disillusioned.

It had been his task on behalf of Great Britain to try and talk Adolf Hitler, Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Joachim Von Ribbentrop out of starting World War II.

Henderson broke himself completely on the unyielding rocks of Nazi determination and Hitlerite double-dealing. He was British ambassador to Berlin at the time that war broke out.

HE SPENT virtually all of his time between the Munich pact of 1938 and the German invasion of Poland in 1939 trying to find out the course of German policy and forestall war if possible.

No more tragic, futile story ever has been told than the one set for in Henderson's own book which he so aptly titled "Failure of a Mission."

From the beginning Henderson found it virtually impossible to talk to, much less deal with Hitler and Ribbentrop. So he did the completely logical thing and tried to win the confidence of Goering.

The cultured Briton had little use for the fat field marshal's grossness and mental peculiarities. But it was of some diplomatic value to visit frequently at Karinhall or one of Goering's hunting lodges.

He found out, for example, that German rearmament was a very real thing and that the Hitler crowd was fanatically determined to have its "Lebensraum" and more—regardless of whether that meant plunging the whole world into war.

BUT HIS BOOK bristles with disappointments, such as finding Goering in a mood where he would talk only of women, art treasures or pigsticking and stubbornly ignored all realities.

And how Ribbentrop as foreign minister called him in to read off ultimatums at such breakneck speeds that even secretaries and stenographers well versed in German could not understand what he was saying.

Bataan Courage Tested At Home

WILLOUGHBY, Feb. 17.—The courage of William Lash, which enabled him to survive the Bataan death march, was severely tested yesterday again in a fire which destroyed the home of his family in Willoughby Township.

The fire started when a kerosene oil cook stove exploded, showering the interior with flaming oil.

Mrs. Lash managed to grab her youngest son, four months old, and rush outside with her clothes ablaze. Lash, outdoors at the time, rushed in and rescued his other son, 16 months old, then extinguished his wife's burning clothing.

less still is a great deal of his material in Britain's secret archives. Quite another picture of prewar double-dealing may emerge if these are opened to public view.

COLUMBIA GAS SYSTEM IN 1947

From The Annual Report of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation

By most standards, 1947 was a highly successful year for the Columbia Gas System. The subsidiary operating companies delivered more gas to their customers than ever before. Gas earnings reached the highest in history. And more money was distributed in dividends than has been paid for many years.

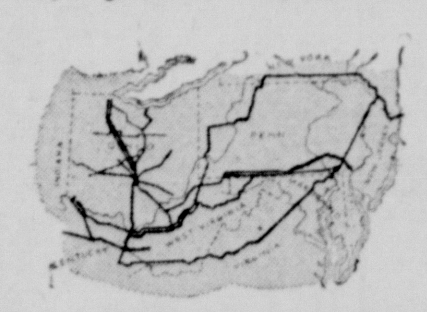

But while these results were achieved, the System did not escape the inflation that beset most business in this country. Costs were higher, materials hard to get. And because of shortages, we, in turn, were unable to deliver all the gas our customers wanted.

In the months to come, the facilities of this public service will grow. More and more gas from the more than adequate reserves will flow through Columbia's lines.

And because the gas we furnish has become such a vital force in the economic development of the communities we serve, we have an abiding sense of responsibility in bringing a constantly improving service to them.

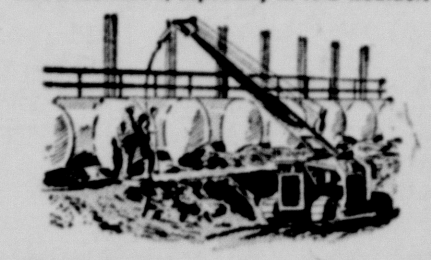

Columbia serves natural gas to a million homes and businesses in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland; and delivers gas to other public utilities in this area which, in turn, sell gas to another 800,000 customers.

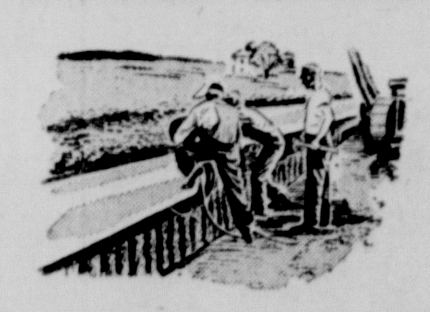

More gas than ever before was wanted by and delivered to those customers in 1947. There were 26 days in December when the System delivered more than a billion cubic feet a day, and for the year, Columbia delivered a total of 231 billion cubic feet, a gain of 18.5 per cent over 1946.

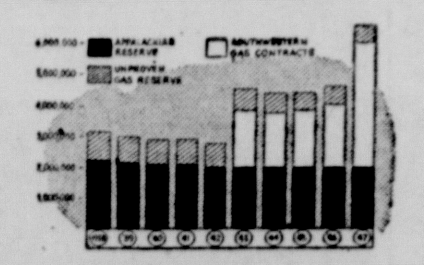

The tremendous peaks created by this unprecedented demand were met in part by building 12 liquefied petroleum plants; by storing more gas underground; by bringing more gas into the System from Southwest fields in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Kansas. Yet these increases were not enough to meet all the wants of the System's customers, especially in cold weather.

Columbia spent $30,594,411 for production, storage, transmission and distribution facilities in 1947. To meet the still increasing demand for this clean, convenient low-cost fuel, the System plans to spend an additional $111,000,000 in 1948, 1949 and 1950.

Even with 1947 sales at an all time high, gas reserves of the System increased to an estimated 6 1/2 trillion feet, 2 1/2 trillion of which are in the Appalachian area and 4 trillion under contract from Southwest fields—enough natural gas to supply existing and prospective customers for many years to come.

Modernism Takes Sharp Lashing

Proper Bostonians Snub Surrealism

BOSTON, Feb. 17—The Proper Bostonians have taken up arms against modern art, and an artistic rhubarb of heroic proportions seems to be in the making today.

It all started when Boston's Institute of Modern Art changed its name to "The Institute of Contemporary Art."

Along with the change of name, the institute issued a blast at modern art, terming it "a cult of bewilderment" and "a playground for doubt-talk, opportunism and chicanery."

No sooner had the Bostonians sounded off, then Herman More, curator of the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York, said:

"I'm afraid the art reactionaries will take great comfort from such statements. I think it is a mistake at this time to go over to the side of the reactionaries."

The change of name, said the Boston organization was prompted by the fact that the phrase "modern art" now signifies something "unintelligible, even meaningless" for millions.

MODERN ART, said the institute's statement, was "valid" as an art form when it was first projected by European artists of the late nineteenth century.

However, it went on, modern art has degenerated from "the characteristics of a few inspired innovators" into "distortions by incompetent imitators."

The Boston people, probably anticipating accusations of narrowness, denied that their stand was "an invitation to reaction."

They added that any institution dedicated to contemporary art has the following primary function:

"It must attempt to distinguish the good art from the bad, the sincere from the sham. These responsibilities cannot be evaded on the grounds that time may reverse such judgments."

At the Museum of Modern Art in New York, where dadaism, surrealism, and cubism are allowed to run riot, Director Alfred H. Barr showed remarkable restraint when he said of the Boston statement: "It seems sort of funny."

Giant Ice Flow Moves On Town

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Feb. 17—A giant ice floe about 40 miles square moved toward the Provincetown and Truro waterfronts today and threatened to smash a million dollars worth of shore installations, boats and Summer homes.

The ice field broke loose last Saturday in Cape Cod Bay and has been slowly moving beachward. A strong southwest wind pushed the mass along.

Coast guard headquarters said it would send ice breakers out to smash the floe as best they could.

Single Hen Formula Set

Add 25.

Weight of hen—5 pounds.

Hen lays 105 eggs per year. Divide this figure by 7. Result 15.

Total feed required — 80 pounds. (65 plus 15).

The exact boundaries of Saudi Arabia are indefinite, but the country contains more than 800,000 square miles.

Giant Ice Flow Moves On Town

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Feb. 17—A giant ice flow about 40 miles square moved toward the Provincetown and Truro waterfronts today and threatened to smash a million dollars worth of shore installations, boats and summer homes.

The ice field broke loose last Saturday in Cape Cod Bay and has been slowly moving beachward. A strong southwest wind pushed the mass along.

Coast guard headquarters said it would send ice breakers out to smash the flow as best they could.

The mass advanced on the Provincetown port last Saturday

High egg production clearly takes more feed, but just as clearly the feed, brings a greater return in terms of eggs than the same amount fed to low-producing hens. Dr. L. E. Card of the Illinois experiment station explains how to compute the total feed required for one hen for a year:

Multiply the live weight of the bird, in pounds, by 8.

Add 25.

Divide the total number of eggs the hen lays by 7 (e. g. 105 divided by 7 equals 15) and add this figure to the total obtained by the first two steps. An example:

Weight of hen—5 pounds.

Five times 8 equals 40; plus 25 equals 65.

Hen lays 105 eggs per year. Divide this figure by 7. Result 15.

Total feed required — 80 pounds. (65 plus 15).

Texas Fistfight Brings Ruling: Pro Golfers Must Stop Cheating

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—Effective immediately, America's professional golfers must quit cheating.

This was the ruling made today by Ed Dudley, president of the Professional Golf Association, as an aftermath to the fistfight over the weekend at Harlingen, Texas.

Dudley ruled before leaving New York that rules of the United States Golf Association must be enforced from here on and that defaced clubs must be thrown out of tournaments.

Dudley said that the only exception to the USGA rules would be that the professionals may carry 16 clubs, instead of the 14 prescribed by the USGA.

DUDLEY said:

"All this hollering and carrying on by the professional isn't anything but a bunch of boys shooting off the steam. Oh, sure we are sorry Henry Ransom slugged Norman Von Nida."

If the cheating on clubs is really to be discontinued, the ruling means that beginning Thursday at New Orleans all clubs which have been defaced must be thrown out of the tournament.

The ruling by Dudley also means that balls must not be teed up on the fairways.

In this connection he said that Winter rules no longer would apply. The Winter rules caused all the commotion at Harlingen, where the pros finally wound up in a fist fight that led to Lawson Little resigning as chairman of the rules committee.

Little wanted a half dozen pros thrown out for rules violations, but was over-ruled by the tournament committee, headed by George Smeiter.

DUDLEY said he had given Smeiter carte blanche to run the tournaments as he sees fit but added that this doesn't mean that Smeiter is taking over.

Dudley denied that Smeiter is the czar of golf.

He added: "There is no czar. All Smeiter is doing is trying to run the thing right."

Dudley could not explain what happened at Harlingen to enable Smeiter and his committee to over-ruled Lawson Little on a rules interpretation, considering that Little was chairman of the rules committee.

AAC Conference Extended; Few Items Settled

CHICAGO, Feb. 17—The All-America Football Conference has extended its Winter planning session today with hopes of settling a schedule and adjourning by tonight.

When last heard of, the coaches and bigwigs hadn't settled too much. Still up for grabs were the identities of the new Chicago Rocket backers, a new coach for the Los Angeles Dons, and 17 of the 20 players given by more fortunate clubs to "weak-sisters" Brooklyn, Baltimore and Chicago.

Three players transferred from Cleveland to bolster the Rockets were identified. They are Roman Piskor, who played tackle for the Browns last season, and Collegians Pete Ashbaugh (quarterback, Notre Dame) and John Rapacz (center, Oklahoma).

A slight turmoil arose over Rapacz, who made International News Service's All-America third team in 1947. Rapacz says he hasn't signed with the Browns and thereby can't very well be transferred. The Browns say they've got him signed.

The matter of a coach for Los Angeles seemed definitely to lie among three southern mentors, Carl Snively of North Carolina, Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech and Bob Neyland of Tennessee. Pacific Coast Jimmy Phelan's name was mentioned too.

Circleville Awaiting Meeting Against Tough Hillsboro '5

The Indians scalped the Tigers during the first Tiger-Indian fray, held in the Roll-n-Bowl, by a 68-43 hand-down, employing a fast break in conjunction with some brilliantly-executed screen plays.

In addition to the powerful offense displayed by the Indians in their visit, they had one of the best defenses the Circleville squad has faced. The Hillsboro boys grabbed almost every pass thrown into their set-up zone.

Coach Dorwin Peer's lads have shown an improved game over their last meeting with the

Tournament Highlights

The first round of the Pickaway County Class B basketball tourney began in the Fairgrounds Coliseum Monday night and was witnessed by 1,643 fans.

The Pickaway County band, under the direction of Richard Valentine, supplied the music for the opener, the 60-piece organization giving out with an ample quantity of quality ditties.

Two tiny tots, Miss Joyce Skinner, 6, of Atlanta, and Carolyn Gasto, also 6, of Monroe, stole the show several times when they accompanied cheerleaders onto the floor to perform their gyrations with equal grace and feeling. Both the youngsters were dressed in cheerleader outfits to duplicate their older yell-leaders.

Charley Hardin and Billy Evans, both of Pickaway township school, donated their time and muscle to make the floor a better playing area by placing themselves on the working ends of two large dust mops, cleaning the surface of the court between every half.

Most instantaneous response to any cheer during the evening came when the Jackson cheerleaders went into their "two bits, four bits" etc., a cheer designed to have all Jackson rooters stand and yell at the top of their voices, which they did.

A youngster in the second row of the steel bleachers lost his cap of pop during the Monroe-Darby fray, much to his discontent, not to say the discontent spread around him when his pop was distributed over several persons when the game ball knocked it out of his hand. The game was held up while officials removed the dark sticky fluid from the ball.

The crowd at the opener deserves commendation, not acting with the hot-headedness many persons associate with those who follow the sport.

Only one ill-advised "boo" was heard during the whole play. The rest of the crowd following the good example set by the players, who took their due with only a slight grimace now and again.

Many unhappy fans returned to their family jalousies after the hubbub had died down, muttering to themselves as they stumbled toward their bogged-down cars through a near quagmire.

POWERFUL INFLUENCE

OSU Defeats Wisconsin, Boosts Wolves To Top

COLUMBUS, Feb. 17—For a team that's not going anywhere itself, Ohio State exerts a powerful influence on the Big Nine basketball race.

Two weeks go the Bucks knocked Michigan out of the conference lead by scoring an upset victory on the State Fairgrounds Coliseum boards. Last night, OSU boosted the Wolverines back into the top position by knocking Wisconsin head over heels into second place. The Bucks surprised the Badgers, 53 to 47, after taking the lead midway through the first half.

Ohio's Dick Schnittrick was a potent factor. Not only did he wind up the evening with 24 points, only two short of the Buck season scoring record of 269. The Buck scoring also broke the back of a Wisconsin rally with four consecutive buckets in the second half.

WISCONSIN'S Bobby Cook had 17 points for the Badgers. It was Ohio's fourth conference victory in 10 games and Wisconsin's third loss in nine.

Michigan, prancing atop the Western Conference cage standings, is full bent on becoming the first Big Nine school in 13 academic years to double-slam with undisputed championships in football and basketball.

Not since Purdue annexed the football title in 1929 and the basketball crown in 1930 has a conference club accomplished the twin conquests within a school year.

The Wolverines defeated Indiana, 66 to 54, at Ann Arbor last night, and Ohio State home-floored Wisconsin. Now Michigan has won six, lost two and Wisconsin and Iowa have won six, lost three each.

A Wisconsin-Iowa rematch is slated for Iowa City Saturday night, and at the same time Michigan must take to the road, playing Minnesota at Minneapolis. Purdue plays at Illinois, while Northwestern and Indiana meet at Chicago stadium. Ohio State visits a non-league foe, Michigan State.

MICHIGAN plays at Purdue next Monday night, then returns to play its last two conference games at home, against Ohio State and Iowa.

In addition to entertaining Wisconsin Saturday and playing at Michigan on March 1, Iowa entertains Minnesota at Iowa City Feb. 28.

Wisconsin is at Iowa Saturday night, home to Northwestern Monday night, and at Minnesota March 1.

Texas Fistfight Brings Ruling: Pro Golfers Must Stop Cheating

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—Effective immediately, America's professional golfers must quit cheating.

This was the ruling made today by Ed Dudley, president of the Professional Golf Association, as an aftermath to the fistfight over the weekend at Harlingen, Texas.

Dudley ruled before leaving New York that rules of the United States Golf Association must be enforced from here on and that defaced clubs must be thrown out of tournaments.

Dudley said that the only exception to the USGA rules would be that the professionals may carry 16 clubs, instead of the 14 prescribed by the USGA.

DUDLEY said: "All this hollering and carrying on by the professional isn't anything but a bunch of boys shooting off the steam. Oh, sure we are sorry Henry Ransom slugged Norman Von Nida."

If the cheating on clubs is really to be discontinued, the ruling means that beginning Thursday at New Orleans all clubs which have been defaced must be thrown out of the tournament.

The ruling by Dudley also means that balls must not be teed up on the fairways.

In this connection he said that Winter rules no longer would apply.

AAC Conference Extended; Few Items Settled

CHICAGO, Feb. 17—The All-America Football Conference has extended its Winter planning session into today with hopes of settling a schedule and adjourning by tonight.

When last heard of, the coaches and bigwigs hadn't settled too much. Still up for grabs were the identities of the new Chicago Rocket backers, a new coach for the Los Angeles Dons, and 17 of the 20 players given by more fortunate clubs to "weak-sisters" Brooklyn, Baltimore and Chicago.

Three players transferred from Cleveland to bolster the Rockets were identified. They are Roman Piskor, who played tackle for the Browns last season, and Collegians Pete Ashbaugh (quarterback, Notre Dame) and John Rapacz (center, Oklahoma).

A slight turmoil arose over Rapacz, who made International News Service's All-America third team in 1947. Rapacz says he hasn't signed with the Browns and thereby can't very well be transferred. The Browns say they've got him signed.

The matter of a coach for Los Angeles seemed definitely to lie among three southern mentors, Carl Snively of North Carolina, Bobby Dodd of Georgia Tech and Bob Neyland of Tennessee. Pacific Coast Jimmy Phelan's name was mentioned too.

The Indians scalped the Tigers during the first Tiger-Indian fray, held in the Roll-n-Bowl, by a 68-43 hand-dout, employing a fast break in conjunction with some brilliantly-executed screen plays.

In addition to the powerful offense displayed by the Indians in their visit, they had one of the best defenses the Circleville squad has faced. The Hillsboro boys grabbed almost every pass thrown into their set-up zone.

Friday night hosts, however, and Peer expects the play to be tighter to the stomach in the impending fracas.

STEVE BRUDZINSKI's reserves will travel to the home of the junior Hillsboro tribe Friday with the thought of vindicating themselves after their Friday night loss to Greenfield, their first South Central League defeat of the season.

In the first game played between the junior Indians and the Circleville youngsters, Brudzinski's charges came through on the top side of the score, holding a 34-20 final against the invaders.

Varsity action is slated to begin at 8 p. m., preceded by the junior fray, which starts at 7.

3 Of 10 Ohio Veterans Draw On 52-20 Club

The so-called "52-20 Club"—World War II veterans who have drawn or are drawing readjustment allowances under the GI Bill of Rights—has a comparatively small membership in Ohio, C. C. Thomas, local bureau of unemployment compensation manager, reported Monday.

Of a total 833,000 Ohioans discharged from the armed forces up to the end of 1947, only 241,000 have received readjustment allowance payments. This means that seven out of every ten Ohio veterans have never drawn such allowances.

Only one out of every 50 Ohio ex-servicemen is permanently out of the readjustment allowance picture. Fewer than 17,000 have completely exhausted their benefits under the program.

Nine out of every 100 Ohio veterans who drew one or more weekly payments—and who were otherwise eligible to draw 52—remained unemployed long enough to exhaust their allowances.

As of the beginning of this year, three out of every five Ohio veterans had never filed a claim for readjustment allowances.

Russian Note Supports Italy

ROME, Feb. 17 — The Italian foreign office announced today receipt of a Russian note supporting the assignment to Italian trusteeship of all of Italy's former colonies in Africa.

The foreign office said the note repeated the statement of Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov in May, 1946, that Italy should be entrusted with the trusteeships "for a reasonable time."

Significantly, the note comes as the Soviet Union is protesting use of the Mellaha airfield, in the former Italian colony of Libya, by American planes as a violation of the peace treaty.

Belgians, Dutch Press Demands

LONDON, Feb. 17 — Belgium and Holland were reliably reported today to be insisting on full participation in the forthcoming three-power London conference on Germany as the price of their adhesion to a Western European union.

Meanwhile the conference, scheduled to begin tomorrow, was postponed to Feb. 23 at the request of U. S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas. Douglas notified Britain and France that he will be unable to return to his London post from Washington until then.

The firm stand of the lowlands countries threw a stumbling block in the way of the efforts of Britain, France, and the United States to agree on a German policy.

Osteopaths OK'd To Treat Vets

Osteopathic physicians now are authorized to provide outpatient treatment within certain limits to veterans with service-connected disabilities, James P. Shea, Pickaway County veterans service officer, reported.

"Within the limits of practice of the healing art imposed by their respective state licenses, osteopathic physicians, when their services are requested by veterans, may be designated to provide outpatient treatment, on a fee basis, for service-connected disabilities under the same rules and regulations as govern such services by doctors of medicine," Shea said.

Public Law 293, 79th Congress, authorizes the Veterans Administration to hire doctors of osteopathy to work with veterans. All treatment given by doctors of osteopathy or doctors of medicine under the "home town" medical care program must have prior approval of VA, he added.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 17—State Education Director Clyde V. Hisson has "pooh-poohed" a report that the Ohio censorship division had "multilated" Producer Walter Wanger's film, "Secret Behind The Door."

Hollywood Commentator Louella Parsons quoted Wanger as stating that he would not release the film in Ohio because of many censorship deletions made in the Buckeye state.

Hisson admitted that "the Ohio board has a reputation for being tough on crime" and stated that "the board softened the crime element of the film," which deals with a psychological attempt at murder.
